CLEVER STORIES

存起 在电流电流电流 化电流电流 不电流电流 医电影电影电影电影电影电影电影电影

Are being printed in our Sunday Magazine every Sunday, though the time for the publication of those entered in the prize contest has not arrived. One of the best published in recent times is

"Tenor and Intruder,"

Stanley Olmsted.

The story of the love of a tenor in grand opera. His early triumphs, the breakdown of his voice, his recuperation on a Texas ranch, his infatuation for the fiancee of a count, and his final triumph at the Metropolitan, where real love comes to its own-such is in brief an outline of this powerful story. The author has made a reputation as a writer of tales of theatrical life, and this reads like his masterpiece.

> "Home of the Quick Answer." In the same number Irvin S. Cobb will relate some choice Broadway anecdotes in the style that made his "Broadway Bluff so well liked. Francis Wilson, John Kendrick Bangs, Wilton Lackage and many others of the "Great Bright Way" are

"THE TRAP"

Is not fiction, but it is as entertaining in its way. It is a story-article by James Hay, jr., about the wonderful secret service organization of the postal and legal departments of the federal government, and how the public is protected from many kinds of fraud.

"MY EARLY STRUGGLES."

Mascagni, the composer, tells of the hardships that beset him in former days in Italy. One of the most interesting things is the story of how the "Cavalleria Rusticana" was written.

"Secret of the Sixth Floor Room."

William Johnston shows his versatility by describing the clever detective work which a metropolitan reporter did, and the strange facts he brought to light.

"National Topliners," a collection of anecdotes of Washington notables, you will also find pleasant reading, and George Gibbs' "The Bolted Door" is more interesting than ever in the next Sunday Magazine

Modern School Buildings.

Mr. Cox said in his opening remarks that the schools had undergone a great change in the past few years, and that the new modern buildings were a great improvement over the jail-like building of a few years ago. One of the principles of the present board of education, declared Mr. Cox, was to have plenty of room in which games might be played.

There was a standard of thirty square was asked for first and the building after ward instead of ground and building at the same time, for Congress seldom cut the appropriation for building lots to any
